The Coronavirus (COVID-19) situation in the U.S. is evolving rapidly as more becomes known about the virus, how it is spread and how it affects people. California is working diligently with the federal government, local governments, health care providers and health facilities to protect Californians from COVID-19.

On March 4, 2020, Governor Newsom declared a State of Emergency. This allowed California to formalize emergency plans and make additional resources available. Increasingly, more and more Californians are being asked to remain in their homes to reduce the spread of COVID-19. Many are struggling to deal with the aftermath of the procedures taken to protect California.
